Century Award

Perfect. To receive a Century Award is to be defined as perfect. It is a 100-point perfect score, unanimously, from all judges present at the awards tasting program. Unanimous.

Only a selection of these brands makes it to the prestigious level. It is the ultimate accolade and the utmost level of achievement in a spirits and wine brand. Unparalleled.

Double Gold Award

Outstanding. Spirits and wine awarded a Double Gold are beyond industry standards and celebrated with prominent elegance in their respected categories. These brands define finesse and make a palate dance with superiority. When you achieve this award, your brand defies gravity.

Gold Award

Great and distinguished with high praise and worthy of celebration. Our Gold award is a high merit of achievement. These are the brands that set the bar beyond standard heights and reach it — at all costs and are classified as some of the best brands in the arena. Hue, Taste, Texture, Power, Length, and Echo all balance to create a superb flavor and moment.

Silver Award

Rated as good and recommended for the public, our Silver award recipients demonstrate a noticeable well-balanced presence between flavor and complexity, taste and finish. Many of our Silver recipients can be found nationally in stores, restaurants, bars, and online.

Bronze Award

Our Bronze award recognizes these brands to be fair, well-crafted, attractive to nose, taste, and finish—worthy of recognition.

Enter your brand today.

Dear Readers,

Our January 2023 edition is our annual Winners Edition highlighting the winners, medals, and showcasing some of our prestigious judges—all beverage buyers—and give you an up close and personal look at the US's largest combined wine, spirits, and beverage competitions.

It was an amazing weekend in November for the fourth annual PR%F Awards Spirits, Wine & Beverage competition held in Las Vegas on November 5-6 at the William F. Harrah College of Hospitality at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. PR%F Awards partnered with the college of hospitality as a platform to provide valuable education and experience to its students. PR%F Awards is the first spirits and wine competition to partner with a top-accredited college university.

More than 40 students participated behind the scenes learning how to create, manage and operate the world's largest spirits competition. PR%F judges and partners will also become part of the curriculum this coming year, instructing, mentoring, and working with students of the college throughout the year.

A very special thank you to my signature partners.

Food and Beverage Magazine's Publisher Michael Politz and all of the laughs we have along the way; Dave Hoemann and Brittney Chardin of Delta Sky Club; CKM and Jennifer Johnson at the Palms Casino Resort; Dean Stowe Shoemaker, Murray Mackenzie, Chris Lindsey, and Angela Ramsey at William F. Harrah College of Hospitality at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas; George Manska, founder of The NEAT Glass; Debbie Hall and the staff and writers at PR%F the Magazine including Colleen Banks, Terry Hart, RJ Dixon and Jennifer English. Thank you to Opulent Spirits & Wine for housing PR%F Awards.

We also have exciting news for the expansion of PR%F Awards in 2023. I have one word for you... Suds.

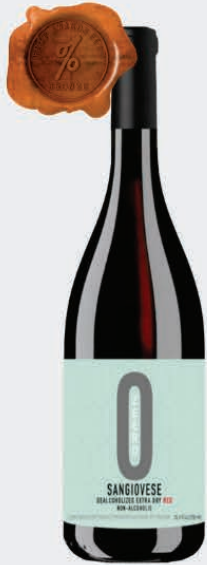

Cheers, Double Golds, and Namaste!

ZEERO SANGIOVESE

● EXTRA DRY ITALIAN RED WINE ●

PREMIUM NON-ALCOHOLIC WINE

One sip and you will rejoice from drinking a juicy glass of this non-alcoholic Italian red. Notes of red plum, rhubarb and black cherry with well-balanced tannins and a beautiful earthy full body. It's deep ruby red in color.

CUSTOMER REVIEWS

"It has the color, flavor and dry characteristics of a great Italian red. I found my new NA wine alternative!"

"Very nice nose and decent on the palate with some nice tartness. Enjoyable with pasta and red sauce."

PR%F Awards — Two Competitions

By Michele Tell

THE ULTIMATE WHY BEHIND THE COVETED SPIRITS/WINE AWARDS PROGRAM

Congratulations to all the entrants who participated in the Fourth Annual PR%F Awards. What started as a dream just before Covid took over has materialized into a must-attend beverage rating competition for emerging new spirits/wine brands/and alcohol-free beverages. Our judges—all beverage buyers—are offered an up-close personal and private introduction to these brands.

This year, we had hundreds of entries and judges from 18 states and regions of the country.

WHAT ARE THE PR%F AWARDS?

At the PR%F Awards, beverage brands are judged separately for two different types of competitions during a two-day private event competition. Brands are rated against a 100-point rating program. So, we like to call it “brand against itself” rather than other competitions where brands are compared to other like-brands.

PR%F Awards

MASKED

The coveted double-blind
tasting competition

On day one, we host the coveted Double-Blind competition. Your brand is rated on a 100-point proprietary system. Brands are judged against themselves only and the 100-point system - NOT AGAINST OTHER SIMILAR VARIETALS. Our double-blind competition is quite strict, so if you are lucky enough to medal in the PR%F Awards “Masked,” your brand must have chops to stand on its own. Our judges know their palates, understand what sells, and they know what the populace is looking for in the current day. In this original PR%F Awards competition no price points are given, only the pertinent information needed to identify the varietal, flavor (if any), ABV, and region/area. Brands are judged on taste and sensory perceptions (color, aroma, taste, & finish).

PR%F Awards

UNMASKED

The total package competition

PR%F Awards - The Total Package is a combination of the art design, theme, marketing, logo, look and feel, price point, and taste. In this second-day competition, our judges study every single bottle for look and appeal, buyability, and taste, coupled with the price point. Our judges come to the PR%F awards for one reason: to be introduced to the newest spirits, wine, and beverages on the market. They will have a private experience to taste and evaluate hundreds and hundreds of brands with peers to discuss trends, pricing, taste, and appeal with like-minded buyers from different areas of our country.

Our judges are all buyers, including airlines, cruise ships, bars, restaurants, nightclubs, casinos, resorts, grocery stores, national chains, liquor stores, and more. Each brings expertise in their beverage buying arena.

So, we are often asked, "Why did my brand receive one type of medal on the first day and a different medal in The Total Package competition?"

It's simple: the taste is not the only reason customers buy your bottle/can or beverage. It's also not the only reason why our judges want to select your brand to be purchased. Your look, feel, bottle shape, logo, price point, ingredients, and backstory also play a pivotal role in why our judges, all beverage buyers from across the nation, might call you after the PR%F Awards.

If you scored higher in tasting and less in the Total Package, you might want to review your packaging and vice versa. Maybe your spectacular art and price point may have caught the eyes and hearts of our judges, even if your juice might have scored a little less in the double-blind on the day before. If that's the case, kudos to your art design and packaging that made your brand much more approachable!

Our judges—all buyers—were blown away by the creativity, new flavors, continued growth in vodka, tequila, whiskey, and the array of RTDs (unique flavors). The burgeoning Alcohol-Free and coffee-based beverage space were amongst the chatter at this year's PR%F Awards.

All spirits entries were judged in the NEAT glass, the official judging glass for serious spirits competitions, and the first and only sensory science-designed vessel engineered to deliver ALL aromas to the nose for complete, accurate evaluation.

Stay tuned. PR%F Awards V. Our fifth year is coming. For more info, visit www.proofawards.com.

TRUTH OR MYTH

Terroir in Spirits

By George Manska, CSO, CR&D, Arsilica, Inc., sensory researcher, inventor, entrepreneur

Recently, articles proclaiming the notion of terroir in spirits have been published by “experts” who, in our opinion, are trying by any means to create controversy, arouse interest, or amuse themselves with some sort of revelation ...

THE SCIENCE OF SPIRITS

THE DEFINITION OF TERROIR:

- (Wikipedia) Terroir (/tɛˈrwaːr/, French: [tɛʁwaʁ]; from terre, “land”) is a French term used to describe the environmental factors that affect a crop’s phenotype, including unique environment contexts, farming practices, and a crop’s specific growth habitat. Collectively, these contextual characteristics are said to have a character; terroir also refers to this character.
- (Merriam Webster) ter-roir | \ ,ter-'wār \ terroir: the combination of factors including soil, climate, and sunlight that gives wine grapes their distinctive character
- (Dictionary.com) terroir [ter-wahr: French ter-war], the environmental conditions, especially soil and climate, in which grapes are grown and that give a wine its unique flavor and aroma
- (UK Dictionary) terroir Pronunciation / tɛr'wɑː/ /terwar/ the complete natural environment in which a particular wine is produced, including factors such as the soil, topography, and climate. ‘Literal-minded fundamentalists love to call terroir the soil and climate of a specific vineyard, but in truth, it’s about husbandry, about sensitivity to place and its careful management so that the best of things can be delivered of it.’

Terroir has long been associated with wine. Scientists are concerned with identifying the source of compounds underlying specific flavors, but from a much different standpoint than consumers. Researchers want to know how the compound was formed through other basic compounds through the process of cultivation, distillation, and aging, along with the specific temperature, pressure, humidity, sunlight, bacteria, (climate) and terroir. Those who explore, but examining the above definitions reveals vague definitions raising more questions than answers. Many flavors and aromas occur in wines which are explained away by dumping them into the category of terroir, the convenient catch-all for non-scientific wine lovers who smell funky aromas, concluding that they must be terroir because “...grapes just don’t smell or taste like that.” Everything which has no name to the evaluator is called terroir. Sloppy “science and sloppy evaluation” leads to misinformation.

Many terroir-associated aromas arise during fermentation from yeast and are added from oak barrels. Stems and leaves are left in the crush and fermented along with the fruit. Some may come from soil bacteria in particular regions or associated with a specific grape varietal. Conversations of terroir seldom exist in white wines, particularly those processed in stainless steel. Terroir is also said to be influenced by human factors of traditional growing and vinting processes within a region. Terroir generally seems to come into the evaluator’s conversations more often when discussing oak barrel-aged red wines, where bacterial and fungal aromas grow during the aging process, perhaps leading to the confusion of barrel-associated aromas with regional terroir aromas and flavors.

Cool-produced white wine is generally fermented under 16°C, and peak red wine fermentation is just over 29°C. However, distillation begins at 78°C, and the average is around 93°C. Complete microbicidal sterilization occurs in the 160°C-190°C range. Fungi and yeast are killed at 71°C to 75°C; penicillium is killed at 55°C. Many aromas in wine commonly ascribed to terroir are killed at distillation temperatures.

THE CASE FOR NO TERROIR IN SPIRITS

Ethanol is the real killer. Hand sanitizers are used at room temperatures and made from both ethanol and methanol because they break down cell membranes, and the bacteria die and dissolve quickly (amphiphilic). If the yield of ethanol from distillation is around 90+ %, its concentration is more than adequate to kill bacteria (CDC says 60%, some now say 90% ethanol is necessary to kill Covid completely). Most of what is commonly described as terroir in wine cannot exist in spirits unless it is added after initial distillation (not terroir because it did not come from the land or climate but perhaps in the barrel of an aged spirit).

The question that must be asked is, “How can we discuss or discover a particular terroir in spirits if we have no idea where the grain was grown?” Unlike wine, the geographic source of spirits grains cannot be precisely known, as most distillers do not grow their own grain and buy from various suppliers and do not have the advantage of tracking the climate and soil contributions peculiar to a fixed location, as does a specific vineyard belonging to the winemaker.

If terroir in spirits is not understood, recognizable, repeatable, and trackable from its region of origin, what good is it? Is it really terroir? What could be the terroir characteristics of vodka? Would we know the exact growing area of the grain or potato (or other sources)? Could we say that it was characteristic (if we could detect it repeatedly) of all grains from that region? Will we sit back someday and speak with confidence, “I detect the aromas in this vodka to be highly characteristic of potatoes grown on the north side of hill #71 in the Idaho russet potato appellation?” Ridiculous! Many more questions arise about the definition of terroir than about description.

Terroir in spirits is pushing the envelope of believability and rationale and has not yet been substantiated by science. Terroir has not been definable or detectable in the final distilled products of plums (slivovitz), tangerines (liqueur), lemons (limoncello), agave (tequila), sugar cane (rum). These sources are chemically more complex than grain, so why would wheat or corn have terroir? What exactly is it, and how would you track it to a specific area with a specific soil, climate, water, etc.? Scientific proof could change that, but for now, fuhgeddaboutit.

TAKEAWAY

True terroir exists in wine in the instances that aromas can be traced directly to the soil, practice, or particular climate cycles. Counter to its definition, among amateur tasters, terroir has come to mean any aroma or flavor that can't be explained. Many more aromas are relegated to “terroir” by those who steadfastly ignore science. The mystique of terroir is misused by marketers who love to embellish and link vineyards to flavor and aromas. Perhaps spirits “experts” love to have another tool to add excitement to their prose. At best, terroir, as referred to in wine, is an ill-defined catch-all category, and terroir in spirits cannot be proven to be more than a fantasy. Look somewhere else for a descriptor of those aromas and flavors whose source hasn't yet been discovered. A better definition of the exact aromas, flavors, and chemical compounds ascribed to the term terroir is absolutely necessary for accurate evaluation. Until that happens, Fuhgeddaboutit.

PR%F Award-winning 22 Salute Spirits & Coffee™ serves Veterans

Veteran dependent owned, purpose-driven social enterprise brings taste and community to beverages.

22 Salute Spirits & Coffee™ is a 100% military Veteran dependent owned, purpose-driven social enterprise with a Veterans first initiative. They sell South Texas Mesquite Smoked Coffee custom roasted by a United States Navy Veteran, as well as Veteran-made Spirits handcrafted by a Veteran and woman-owned distillery in Maryland. Recently, 22 Salute Vodka was entered into the 2022 PR%F AWARDS competition and received two Silver Medals, one for Masked - Double Blind Tasting and another for Total Package.

The country is estimated to lose an average of 22 United States Veterans to suicide every day. This is the most commonly known statistic based on a study released in early 2013 by researchers at the Department of Veterans Affairs. However, that number has steadily been increasing since 2020. This is partially due to Veterans and First Responders not having sufficient access to mental health treatment provided through their insurance. This leads to many accounts of untreated PTSD in Veterans throughout the country. Supporting Veterans and First Responders is vital, but it can be challenging to find companies that help address issues that support Veterans and First Responders.

Recognizing the 22 average military suicides per day is not just reflected in the name; the number “22” can be found throughout many aspects of the 22 Salute brand. The vodka is charcoal filtered more than 22 times, elevating the smoothness and making it a crisp, clean-tasting vodka. The uniquely designed 1-liter bottle holds 22 1.5 ounces of Salute Shots™, so getting friends together for a toast has become meaningful.

22 Salute was founded to support Veteran-made products and honor Veterans and First Responders who have courageously served our nation. With every purchase, a portion of the 22 Salute proceeds go to The Veterans Connection (TVC), a non-profit organization focused on improving these heroes' quality of life through a four-phase approach. This is implemented by aiming to CONNECT veterans to a supportive community, to EMPOWER them and minimize their stress, to ALIGN them with alternative healing solutions to maintain positive mental health, and to help them THRIVE through career and financial growth. To learn more about The Veterans Connection, visit theveteransconnection.org and follow on Facebook @ theveteranconnection and Instagram @ theveteransconnection.

In September, 22 Salute Spirits and Coffee™ proudly announced its first partnerships with Smith's Food & Drug/The Kroger Co. and Summit Spirits & Wine in Las Vegas. The support from the Las Vegas community has been remarkable. Within 60 days of selling their first bottle, 22 Salute Vodka went from two stores in Las Vegas to 51 locations throughout Nevada.

“We've had the opportunity to speak to customers purchasing 22 Salute Vodka, and we have heard countless heartfelt stories from people who have loved ones that are Veterans, and they tell us how much our cause means to them,” says Eric Ranks, 22 Salute CEO & Co-Founder. “We have a great quality product, and we get to make a positive, meaningful impact in the Veteran and First Responder communities.”

22 Salute launched in Utah and Texas in late December. They have licenses, a distributor for Florida, Maryland, Washington D.C., California, and New York, and the ability to ship their coffee nationwide and vodka in 36 states direct to door. In addition, 22 Salute has begun the registration process to expand into Idaho, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Oklahoma, and New Jersey.

With every product sold going towards saving a life, 22 Salute is vodka and coffee “With a Purpose™” made by American heroes supporting American heroes.

Guiding Students in Hospitality

Chef Christopher Lindsay brings expertise to UNLV

By Debbie Hall

Chef Christopher Lindsay brings his love of the culinary arts as lecturer and chef instructor to the William F. Harrah College of Hospitality at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. He teaches food and beverage restaurant management courses bringing his diverse academic and industry background in food, beverage, and hospitality.

Select students from the William F. Harrah College of Hospitality participated in the 2022 PR%F Awards under the guidance of Chef Christopher and his teaching assistant. He chose five students to work directly with him in preparing breakfast and lunch meals.

“It is important from an instructor’s perspective to incorporate the students’ ideas, thoughts, and plans as well guide them on the selection of food, preparation, and presentation. The students worked with me before the event to solidify the planning. The students learned first-hand about the organization necessary for a multi-day event and helped the other 30 student interns that participated in the event.” Graduate student Judell Alexander and instructor Koco Heo were also instrumental in the success of the PR%F Awards this year working with the chef and students.

He is also an alum of UNLV, obtaining his bachelor’s degree in Culinary Management from the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, in 2006 and a master’s degree in Post-Secondary Career & Technical Education with an emphasis in curriculum and instruction from the College of Education in 2016. Chef Christopher also received an associate degree in Culinary Arts from Salt Lake Community College, an American Culinary Federation-accredited program. He would first pursue his education as pre-law but eventually decided to switch to a culinary career.

“I wanted to complete my bachelor’s degree, and I selected UNLV for its location [Las Vegas], culinary program, and where I would get the most opportunity after graduation, and that was Las Vegas.”

For an academic career, he first served as executive chef and program chair for East Career Technical Academy (ECTA) opening in Las Vegas. “I had the opportunity to mentor high school students with some high team rankings and really like the aspect of mentoring. I opened ECTA, and I was then offered the chance to teach part-time at UNLV as I transitioned from the hospitality industry to teaching,” he explains. Chef Christopher would pursue his master’s degree at UNLV with the goal of teaching full-time. “I took advantage of all of these opportunities.”

Now a full-time instructor, Chef Christopher looks for qualities such as dedication and interest in a student. He will find out what his student’s background and knowledge in the hospitality industry. As for education, he helps his students discover their interests, such as baking or culinary, and help them grow in their careers.

“After graduation, I continue to maintain relationships with a majority of my students that are working in the industry. Many of them come back to the campus to visit when they are in town and support the current running Hospitality Colleges Food and Beverage Bistro 410 concepts. This ultimate sign of gratitude often overwhelms me. I thank all the students I have had the pleasure to work with over the years,” he says.

As for his inspiration to enter the hospitality industry, he comes from a farming background. “When I was younger, my grandmother would always bake biscuits and cornbread every day for my grandfather, who was working the farm. She would also can foods such as tomatoes and beans. I found cooking and baking so interesting,” says Chef Christopher.

When he was a teenager, his friend owned a restaurant in Salt Lake City, and Chef Christopher bussed tables finding the whole experience and atmosphere in the restaurant exciting. He played sports growing up and really enjoyed the team environment. After he cooked a meal for the family, his father’s mother even told Chef Christopher that he should be a chef.

Chef Christopher’s professional career has allowed him to travel and work in some of the country’s most well-known restaurants, hotels, and casinos. He received training in classical French techniques, although his true passion is cooking a fusion of different cuisines.

During his professional career, Chef Christopher worked for the Ritz Carlton (BACARA in Santa Barbara, California); The La Jolla Beach and Tennis Club (San Diego); Simon's Kitchen (Hard Rock Hotel Las Vegas), and the MGM Grand Hotel (Las Vegas). He held a key position as a Chef de Cuisine at the Atrium Restaurant in the Cliff Lodge at Snowbird Ski & Summer Resort, Utah, where he assisted in hosting corporate guests during the 2002 Winter Olympic Games in Salt Lake City, Utah.

He was recruited to be a culinary production assistant for Chef Todd English on the Turner Broadcasting System (TBS) special, "Dinner and A Movie: Super Chef Cook-Off," and for Chef G. Garvin on TV One Network for the filming of the second and third seasons of "Turn up the Heat" for Powerhouse Productions.

Chef Christopher and his student operate a full-service restaurant as a student-driven concept called Bistro 410, which is open Tuesday through Thursday from 5 to 6:30 p.m. The bar forward menu features tapas and small bites with 40 alcoholic and non-alcoholic beverages. There are different concepts each day created by the students.

It's Sangiovese, Goldilocks!

By Jerry Hammaker

Close your eyes and take a little winter fantasy trip. We walk through the Italian countryside, searching for a place to eat, drink, and sleep. We are hungry and tired!

Sangiovese is one of Italy's most famous grapes. It is primarily produced in Italy's Campania, Tuscany, and Umbria regions. Its region of production labels it; Chianti, Carmignano, Brunello di Montalcino, Montecucco, Morellino di Scansano, Rosso di Montalcino, or Vino Noble de Montepulciano. That's likely a Sangiovese from Tuscany. If you see Montefalco Rosso, that's likely a Sangiovese from Umbria. You can find small amounts of Sangiovese from other parts of the world, but a vast majority is grown and produced in Italy. The tricky thing is figuring out which type of Sangiovese you like best and which pairs best with which food! Like trying to find the perfect meal or the perfect mattress, let's find which of these three Sangiovese's is just right for you, Goldilocks!

Italy has a wine classification system much like the EU and France, arranged by quality tiers with more restrictions placed on wines of higher value. Think of it as a pyramid with "Vino" at the base (no geographic indication and no real production rules). The next higher tier is IGT (at least 85% of the grapes and production come from a specific area). The middle tier is DOC (100% of the grapes and production from a specific area with characteristics and quality due to it), highest tier up is DOCG (stricter rules than DOC, likely with a specific subzone on the label). Chianti, the most popular Sangiovese region, has its own classification system based on the aging of the wine. A wine labeled "Chianti" has six months of aging. A Chianti Classico" or Chianti Superiore has one year of aging, and Chianti Riserva has two years of aging.

First up is the granddaddy of the group—the Papa Bear—Conte Priola 2015 Chianti Riserva DOCG. The label is a classic white with black lettering with a gold crest. In the glass is a clear, medium ruby color with thick legs. On the nose is clean, medium intensity with aromas of red currant and plum, red tomato, black raspberry, and well-worn leather. On the palate is dry, medium/high acidity (makes your mouth water), medium/high tannin (that drawing feeling in your mouth), medium alcohol (burn on the back of the throat), medium/plus body, and medium/plus intensity. There are flavors of sour cherry, cranberry, black cherry, roasted tomato, a nice herbaceous character like time and bay leaf, and a hint of tobacco as a more masculine type of Chianti. It's hard and a bit hot. This is an excellent pairing for rich meats, sauces, lasagna, and pasta with Bolognese sauces. This wine has a pleasant medium-to-long finish, and the ABV is 13%.

Next up, the Baby Bear—Il Bastardo 2019 Rosso di Toscana Sangiovese IGT. The clever label has a man with a thin mustache riding a red Vespa scooter. In the glass is a clear, deep ruby with an orange rim variation and thin legs. On the nose is clean, medium intensity with aromas of herbs like thyme with potpourri and tomato leaf, red cherry, and a balsamic character. On the palate is a bit off-dry, with medium acidity, a touch of bitterness, low/medium tannin, a medium body, and light/medium intensity. This wine has a pleasant but somewhat short finish. The Il Bastardo is a little soft and a bit broken. Granted, it's a 2019 baby with a little aging, so it would tend to be a bit simpler and rough than the others—a great pairing with “football” pizza or simple pasta with red sauce, and ABV is 13%.

Last but not least is Mama Bear—Antinori Santa Cristina 2016 Chianti Superiore DCG, a classy label with Chianti colored print. In the glass is a clear, medium ruby with an orange-to-clear rim variation and supple legs. On the nose is clean, medium intensity aromas of red fruits like cherry and raspberry, along with blueberry and blackberry, a touch of red rose, tobacco leaf, and oak. On the palate is dry, with high acidity, medium tannin, medium/plus body, and intensity. The flavors follow the nose, well-balanced notes of red and dark fruits, sweet tobacco, and a touch of fresh herbs. A pleasant, long finish. The most feminine of the three. It's not too hot or cold. It's not too hard or soft. The Antinori Santa Cristina is just right! It's a very pleasant and well-balanced wine. Pair this with your best Italian-style dishes, marinara or puttanesca sauce, an excellent authentic Italian pizza, or just to sip while overlooking the Tuscan countryside and ABV is 13%.

So, it might take a few tries to find the right Sangiovese. Too hot or too cold. Too hard or too soft. Have fun finding the one that is just right for you!

Sustainability, Autochthonous Varietals, and the Sicilia DOC

How Did We Get Here and Where Are We Going

By Kirk Peterson

Since antiquity, Sicily has been a uniquely favorable area for wine production. Viticulture had played a key role in the island's history from at least the 8th century BC when Phoenician settlers first arrived to take advantage of the fertile soils from past volcanic eruptions and the long, dry growing seasons that made for ideal conditions for grape growing. Archeological evidence of amphorae and other ceramics used for transport indicates that Phoenician merchants commercialized and exported Sicilian wines to the surrounding Mediterranean civilizations shortly after. It is this auspicious proximity to other cultures, along with a particularly favorable climate for viticulture that would shape Sicilian wine production for millennia to come.

The Greeks called it Oenotria, or “the land of vines.” Over the centuries, as each successive inhabitant came and went, from the Romans to the Byzantines to the British, winemaking played a central economic role. Yet while wine production in Sicily was ubiquitous, it wasn’t always equally associated with wine quality. Throughout the history of Sicilian viticulture, there have been periods where, both fairly and unfairly, the enological output of the land of vines has been somewhat maligned, scorned, and often treated as purely a commodity.

One of Sicily’s blessings (and curses) is that growing grapes is comparatively straightforward, at least compared to other wine regions. Possessing more area under vine than any other Italian viticulture area and with an average harvest period from July to November of 100 days, the island’s bounty is understandable. Rich soils and warm summers make it easy to grow vast quantities of grapes to produce enormous quantities of wine. However, from the time of ancient Greece to the modern day, overproduction has had a detrimental effect on quality and price. It has been a poorly kept secret for decades that ripe, higher alcohol. Sicilian wine has been added to save the colder, anemic vintages of more famous (and more expensive) northern European appellations. The irony is that the same wine on its own was often relegated to bulk wine and the bottom shelves of markets throughout Italy and abroad.

Then, in the 1980s, as a renaissance in Italian wine was reinvigorating the industry, this perception began to change as instrumental figures in Sicilian winemaking led the charge to embrace quality over quantity. By the 1990s high, quality wine from Sicily was garnering worldwide acclaim, although heavily based on a proven recipe for international success built on powerful wines based on Chardonnay, Cabernet Sauvignon, and Merlot. They were designed to thrill and delight the wine critics of the time while either masking the true identity of local varieties like Nero d'Avola or omitting them entirely. While forsaking the ancient wealth of indigenous varieties and espousing an ideology of big wines in heavy bottles produced via conventional farming practices and superstar consultants, Sicily gained recognition on the global stage while perhaps losing something of themselves along the way. But then Mt. Etna erupted, both figuratively and literally.

From the early 2000s, the wines of the Etna Mountain enjoyed a meteoric rise in popularity as sommeliers and journalists worldwide fell in love with a hopelessly romantic story. Previously unknown varieties like Nerello Mascalese and Carricante, grown at elevation on vines so isolated some never knew phylloxera, on the side of a perpetually erupting volcano. Wines seemingly made with a sense of place, handcrafted by artisans practicing esoteric farming techniques. Comparisons to Burgundy and Barolo, more complementary than accurate, were made. Most importantly, there was palpable excitement for distinctly and uniquely Sicilian wines. The wines of Mt. Etna were in the right place at the right time. The enthusiasm for them was generated at the nexus of evolving attitudes about wine, recognition of a changing climate, and existential questions about what Italian wine can be that ultimately revealed the path forward for Sicily as a whole.

Italy has the greatest diversity of vitis vinifera in the world, boasting thousands of distinct biotypes, of which about 500 are made into wines produced in commercially viable quantities. The widespread knowledge and celebration of this fact is a recent phenomenon. It is still not uncommon to replant vineyards and replace obscure grapes with more commercially viable ones, and ultimately a pragmatic and defensible business decision. It is the success of wines like Etna Rosso and others made from native grapes throughout Italy that provided that essential economic viability.

The Sicilia DOC (Controlled Denomination of Origin) was established in 2011 to strengthen the identity of Sicilian wine by creating a sustainable, quality-driven denomination promoting indigenous grapes. It is the first regional DOC specifically dedicated entirely to organic viticulture and currently contains 7900+ vine growers and 530 wineries as members who produced 96 million bottles of wine in 2021.

Maximum yields per hectare have been decreased for the denomination to ensure concentration and typicity of flavor. The less fruit produced per hectare, the more selective the winegrower becomes, hence the higher the quality of the wine. Sustainability initiatives include supporting the conversion of wineries to solar power, utilizing lightweight glass bottles, and dictating that wines be vinified in their production zone to limit transportation and lower carbon footprints.

The DOC includes the entire region of Sicily and is inclusive in its labeling laws. Seven additional Sicilian denominations can list “Sicilia” on their labels: Cerasuolo di Vittoria DOCG, Contea di Sclafani DOC, Contessa Entellina

DOC, Etna DOC, Menfi DOC, Noto DOC, and Vittoria DOC. This is particularly beneficial to wineries in lesser-known denominations (Contessa Entellina DOC) to rely on the recognizability of the Sicilia DOC label. They will not have to forego their identity while simultaneously encouraging more well-known DOCGs (Cerasuolo di Vittoria) to utilize the Sicilia name to promote the region as a whole.

Perhaps most significantly, the denomination advocates indigenous Sicilian varieties. While international and non-native grapes are allowed, the denomination places special emphasis on autochthonous (indigenous) varieties like Perricone, Frappato, Catarratto, and Grillo. Respecting Sicily as a crucible for wine production honors the valuable cultural legacy while also having direct and tangible implications for the future. The essential genetic diversity provided by these vines, gained over their long history of adaptation to the island's specific terroirs and microclimates, provides a crucial cornerstone to organic and sustainable viticulture in the face of climate change. The future of Sicilian wine has never looked better.

MEET A FEW OF OUR JUDGES!

Officially named the world's largest spirits and wine competition in the US, PR%F Awards, judges travel across the US to taste and rate spirits, wines, and beverages in a proprietary 100-point rating competition. Each judge is a key buyer and decision maker in the spirits/wine industries and comes from different facets of the industry: distributors, retail, restaurants, bars, nightclubs, resorts, airlines, liquor stores, box chains, and online distributors.

PR%F Awards 2022 features a dual adult beverage competition format to include two competitions in one—PR%F Awards-Masked, The Double-Blind Tasting, and PR%F Awards-Unmasked, The Total Package.

This prestigious honor for winners selected by beverage industry buyers is the ultimate competition with more than 300 categories. PR%F Awards thanks all of its judges and showcases the experts that participate.

Roy Saunders, General Manager
T-Bones Chophouse Red Rock Resort

This is an excellent opportunity to taste old classics as well as new and cutting-edge products. PR%F Awards benefits the beverage industry by bringing in a diverse group of buyers who taste and judge a variety of products and discuss the different flavor profiles and trends in a group setting.

I personally look for quality, expression, and packaging when I rate a spirit brand. As for trends, on-premise: packaging, pricing, and a continued move towards Tequila and brown spirits and off-premise, value and RTD products. On the wine side, RTD products are hot and will continue to gain market share with the younger generation. The bottle has to represent what's inside, whether it's sophisticated for high-end products or whimsical and fun for daily-use products.

This is a great way to gain recognition and visibility, and young brand makers should continue to be consistent with their products.

ROY SAUNDERS

Christopher Isham, Lead Bartender/Bar Manager
Echo & Rig Steakhouse and Butchery

My experience at the PR%F Awards was very educational, being my first time as a judge. It was fun to see the process of competition and what judges look for, from packaging to taste. The PR%F Awards benefit the industry in a way for new products to get recognition and their names out there and receive professional feedback that will help their product for future production.

I look for something that can be applied for service on the bar. Will it catch the customers' eye on the back bar? Does it smell good? Does it taste even better, will my guests order it again and recommend it to others, and most importantly, how can I use it in cocktails?

I'm noticing a lot of different barrels getting passed around amongst distilleries and blending the same spirit with numerous finishes for more complex flavors. Port and rum finishes, barrels that once housed wine, are gaining popularity. Wood is a powerful tool in changing the flavors of spirits.

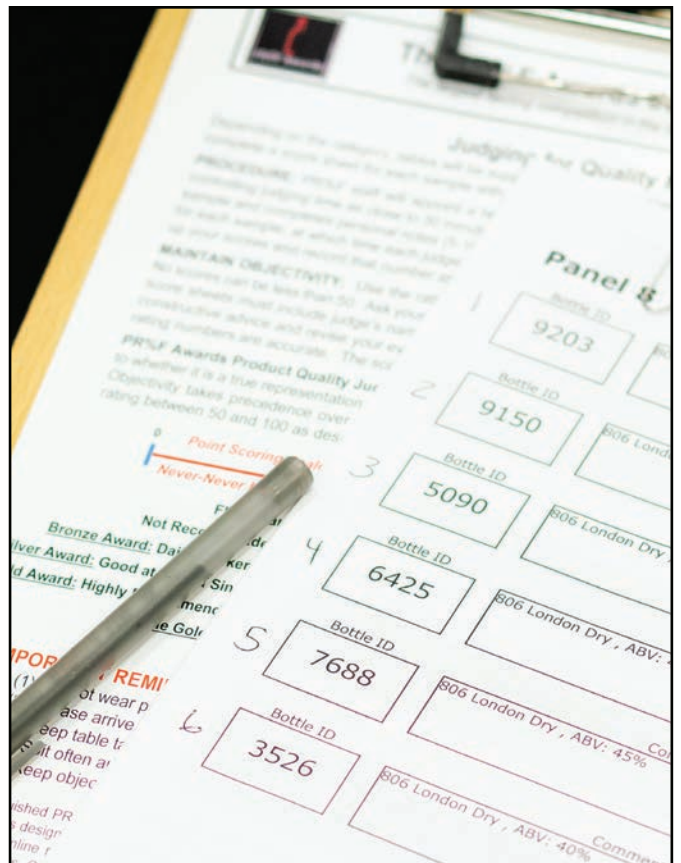

It all depends on its application behind the bar or in a bottle shop. Taller bottles always stand out on the back bar, ones shaped like wine bottles because it is a familiar look throughout history, and of course, bartenders love the tall skinny necks for easy pouring. But for a shop, the casual drinker will be drawn to it as long as it stands out.

People like notoriety. Most people will stick to what they know, but if you're going to try something new and it's been said to achieve a high rating, the drinker will be far more inclined to make a purchase and to something that is unknown.

My advice to young brand makers is not to give up. New brands pop up every year, and the competition is vast. The longer you grind at creating and marketing, the more your brand will pick up steam. Do not be shy about attending competitions and having a booth at festivals.

I am a whiskey fan, so I really enjoyed the Courage and Conviction line. The barrel finishes were on-point flavor-wise, and as I mentioned, with the bottle being simple, they hit the mark. I can still taste that sherry finish. It was fantastic!

Chris Motley, Beverage Specialist/Buyer Liquor World Las Vegas

I really enjoyed this year's judging. It seemed more laid back, and there was more time to get to know the fellow judges. I feel the PR%F Awards benefit the industry by shedding light on new products and creating an environment to really assess them fairly and logically. The average consumer in retail definitely looks at awards and ratings. I see it every single day—medals matter.

My number one thing I look for is aroma and taste. Everything else, from branding to marketing, is secondary. You can fix bad marketing, but you can't fix a faulty spirit.

As the bourbon boom seems to be waning just a bit, I see a return to solid, classic Kentucky brands as far as hunting and collecting go. With economic uncertainty on the rise, folks seem to be looking for comfort in simple, mellow pleasures that are affordable and easy to acquire.

The bottle's shape, look and feel matter a lot. Everything about a product is conveyed through the packaging. Don't skimp on your design budget, and really take in feedback from family and friends on the overall image. Poor product identity will tank a brand very quickly. I advise young brand makers to attend and participate in public tastings at retail outs to get that liquid to lips and engage the customer.

VA Distillery's Courage & Conviction American Single Malt line really stood out. I loved everything about this brand, including great packaging, classic, tasteful bottle and label design. The whiskey inside was some of the best American Single Malt I have tasted. I hope they get distribution in Nevada soon.

Jeff Bresslin, Director of Restaurant Operation Live Nation/House of Blues Las Vegas

My experience was excellent. What a great idea to get that many hospitality professionals in one room to judge to competition. The awards benefit the beverage industry by having a diverse background of judges offering their expertise and honest opinion.

Ingredients that are more balanced represented the products well, with more diverse seltzers and Ready To Drink products/cocktails. I look for a bottle shape since it should be practical and easy to handle when pouring a drink.

The competition offers a chance for unbiased opinion for the product to be judged and provides information on what a judge liked or disliked since it's a blind tasting.

My tip to new brand makers is never to give up and take all feedback positively to improve the product.

Nate Hedlund, Director of Beverage
SAHARA Las Vegas

Having the judges grade spirits upon the criteria, they are looking for in their programs is very important because, at the end of the day, that is who will be selling it. We look for something unique that separates them from the rest in the category but does not go too far out in left field that it does not represent what it is supposed to be. Agave will continue to be the buzzword and category that will continue to grow. At the back bar, people drink with their eyes if they are looking to explore. In the well, keep it simple.

Any producer or brand should be given the opportunity to see where they stand against their competitors. Imagine a world without sports and championships! That is why the PR%F Awards are great.

NATE HEDLUND

Jena Domingue, CEO and Founder | SVP Sales
UrbanVino | WineDirect

To have as many individual brands represented side by side was huge. Whether you are a buyer, distributor or hospitality professional, the exposure and hands on experience is exceptional.

Packaging, branding and prices point alignment deliver on promise and expectations is what I look for when I am judging. So much of design and presentation matters especially in retail. The bottle should tell a story and set the landscape for what is to come. She Wines is a favorite woman-owned brand and I love the Gewürztraminer we tasted on the wine side.

The trends I am seeing are more craft cocktails and RTD beverages, niche options designed for women or other specialty groups, more non-all or low ALC offerings, and more natural ingredients being used.

My advice is to pay attention to your complete package and delivery. Do lots of tasting before selecting and bottling your final product. Be clear on the expectations of your target audience. Have some fun with your brand and be willing to collaborate with others.

Santos Dumont Hors d'Age Heritage

THE TASTE OF BRAZIL

Congratulations to Santos Dumont Hors d'Age Heritage on winning the Best of Show in Design award during PR%F Awards 2022

Santos Dumont is created from fresh Brazilian sugar cane juice blended with molasses-based rum from West Indies and Central America. Santos Dumont chooses, like few others, to blend the two types of rum in a way that can only be described as Santos Dumont. Using his accomplishments as an inspiration we are pushing the boundaries for excellent craftsmanship in every in every bottle of Santos Dumont.

PR%F AWARDS 2022 BEST IN SHOW - Wine

Cornelio Vega Vella Blanco Rioja

ORGANIC WINE

Congratulations to Cornelio Vega Vella Blanco Rioja on winning the Best in Show for Wine award during PR%F Awards 2022

Vega Vella by Cornelio is a range of wines made from organic vineyards on the eastern side of La Rioja, an area with a Mediterranean climate. It's this climate that helps develop and enhance the fruity aromas, bringing out all the virtues of this sauvignon blanc.

CENTURY AWARDS

Century Award

Perfect. To receive a Century Award is to be defined as perfect. It is a 100-point perfect score, unanimously, from all judges present at the awards tasting program. Unanimous. Only a selection of these brands makes it to the prestigious level. It is the ultimate accolade and the utmost level of achievement in a spirits and wine brand. Unparalleled.

Gold Award

Great and distinguished with high praise and worthy of celebration. Our Gold award is a high merit of achievement. These are the brands that set the bar beyond standard heights and reach it — at all costs and are classified as some of the best brands in the arena. Hue, Taste, Texture, Power, Length, and Echo all balance to create a superb flavor and moment.

CELEBRATE!

The 2022 PR%F Awards

Great spirits flowed together in camaraderie and unique tastings when spirit industry leaders gathered to judge the PR%F Awards 2022. Officially named the world's largest spirits and wine competition in the US, PR%F Awards 2022 encompassed innovation with judging. PR%F Awards 2022 featured dual adult beverage competition format including two competitions in one—PR%F Awards-Masked, The Double-Blind Tasting, and PR%F Awards-Unmasked, The Total Package. It was a time of incredible tastings, new partnerships and the fun of Las Vegas with more to come.

PREMIUM NON-ALCOHOLIC WINES

CUSTOMER REVIEWS

"Having health limitations, this proves to be a great alternative. I wouldn't realize that it is non-alcoholic."

"I really enjoyed drinking this non-alcohol wine. One of the best non-alcohol wines that I have tasted. Thanks for creating it."

The coveted double-blind
tasting competition

The original world-class, credible, double-blind tasting competition with buyers from across the US rating spirits, wines, and beverages in a 100-point rating system.

After the double-blind tasting, judges will evaluate each brand unmasked. Judges will see and feel the bottle, can, or product, read the ingredients, hear the story, and see the overall marketing package.
